STEPHEN NOWROSKI

Stephen Nowroski is a municipal leader and code professional with nearly 20 years of experience bridging technical enforcement and public trust. As Township Manager of Moore Township and former Director of Planning and Codes for the City of Easton, he has led multi-department teams, streamlined operations, and delivered budget surpluses while improving service quality. Through his consulting firm, Lumen Strategy, Ltd., Stephen advises municipalities and private clients on land use, ordinance development, and Pennsylvania UCC compliance. A Master Code Professional and AICP certified, he brings deep technical expertise and a strategic understanding of how to build influence with elected officials. His presentations and leadership roles reflect a commitment to empowering professionals to become trusted partners in shaping resilient communities.

JOSHUA Z. STOUCH

Joshua Z. Stouch brings more than 25 years of continuous service in local, county, and state government to his role as Chairman of the Douglass Township (Montgomery County) Board of Supervisors, a position he has held since 2017. His extensive experience in municipal leadership and public safety reflects a long-standing commitment to community stewardship and effective governance.

Mr. Stouch has been an active member of the Douglass Township Planning Agency (2013–2021) and is a founding and current member of the Douglass Township Emergency Services Board, where he has served since its inception in 2013. In addition to his township leadership, he has served as an elected Constable for Douglass Township since 2009, providing vital public safety and judicial services.

Recognized for his expertise and dedication, Mr. Stouch was appointed by the Governor of Pennsylvania to the Pennsylvania Constables Education & Training Board, where he contributes to setting statewide standards and training initiatives for constables. His career reflects an unwavering dedication to building strong communities, fostering public safety, and ensuring responsible government at every level.

WILLIAM J. YEAGLEY

William J. Yeagley brings nearly three decades of distinguished service in code enforcement, municipal administration, and fire safety to his professional engagements. Over the course of twenty-eight years, he has developed a breadth of expertise by working within multiple levels of local government, including a third-class city, a second-class township, and a first-class township. His tenure as an Assistant Township Manager further strengthened his understanding of municipal operations, strategic planning, and community engagement.

Mr. Yeagley currently serves as the Code Compliance Coordinator for Lower Allen Township and as a Supervisor for North Cornwall Township, where he provides leadership in governance, policy development, and public safety initiatives. His extensive background in fire protection is underscored by his credentials as a Certified Fire Instructor, Fire Inspector, and Fire Officer. These certifications reflect both his technical proficiency and his commitment to fostering safe, well-regulated communities.

In 2017, Mr. Yeagley was appointed by the Governor to the Pennsylvania Uniform Construction Code Review and Advisory Council (UCC RAC), representing the Fire Service. In this capacity, he contributes to the evaluation and adoption of statewide construction code, ensuring that Pennsylvania's construction standards meet the highest levels of safety and effectiveness. His perspective integrates practical experience from municipal management with a deep understanding of fire prevention and code compliance.

Throughout his career, Mr. Yeagley has been recognized for his ability to bridge the interests of government officials, fire service professionals, and the public. His presentations provide audiences with authoritative insights on municipal governance, code administration, and fire safety best practices, offering both strategic vision and practical guidance for communities seeking to enhance public safety and regulatory compliance.
